Tom Rosenstiel

A journalist and director of the Project for Excellence in Journalism, Tom Rosenstiel also serves as vice chairman of the Committee of Concerned Journalists, an initiative he co-founded that is engaged in conducting a national conversation among journalists about standards and values.

The Challenge of Democracy in the Age of New Media.

What is the news media’s impact on campaigns and elections in the U.S.? Is there too much emphasis on personalities and perceptions rather than ideas and issues? Does the news media further or frustrate a dialogue on public policy issues?
